Deponent Verbs

There is a group of verbs in Latin which have passive forms but active meanings. They are called deponent verbs because they have "laid aside" (dēpōnō, -ere) their passive meanings but have retained their passive forms. They are translated only in the active voice.

Thus: loquor, loqui, locutus sum, to speak, talk loquor $=I$ speak
loquitur $=h e$, she, it speaks etc.

The conjugation of deponent verbs is completely regular:
First conjugation: cōnor, -ārī, -ātus sum, to try, attempt
Second conjugation:
Third conjugation:
Fourth conjugation: polliceor, -ērī, pollicitus sum, to promise loquor, loquī, locutus sum, to speak, talk orior, orīrī, ortus sum, to rise, arise

Note 1: Deponent verbs, however, have retained a few regular active forms:
a. The present active participle: loquēns, -entis = speaking
b. The future active participle: locutūrus, $-\mathrm{a},-\mathrm{um}=$ about to speak
c. The future active infinitive: locutūrus esse = to be about to speak

Note 2: Because deponent forms are translated actively, they can have no " 4 th principal part" (i.e., they have no perfect passive participle). Instead, the participle form contained in the 3rd principal part (conatus, pollicitus, locutus, ortus, etc.) is a perfect active particple. This participle fills a much needed gap in the language and accordingly is frequently used. Thus:

\begin{array}{ll}
\text { conatus }=\text { having tried } & \text { pollicitus }=\text { having promised } \\
\text { locutus }=\text { having spoken } & \text { ortus }=\text { having arisen }
\end{array}

Semi-Deponent Verbs:

Four verbs in Latin have active forms in the first two principal parts, but deponent forms in the third principal part (i.e., the perfect tense). They also are translated only in the active voice. These verbs are:
